Abstract: Education in ideology and politics for graduate students occupies an important position in the education industry. It is an important part of education in ideology and politics, and it is given higher requirements due to the continuous development of the times. The education in ideology and politics for graduate students in the view of law is to carry out ideological and political theory courses in colleges in a standardized and institutionalized way to enhance students' confidence in learning of ideological and political theory and avoid their resistance to theory learning. This paper studies the ways to carry out education in ideology and politics for graduate students in an innovative way under the perspective of law, and puts forward some suggestions to promote the construction and implementation of education for students.

With the continuous development of times and the continuous progress of society, how to inherit ideological and political content such as Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought that our country adheres to is the main issue that needs to be solved at present<sup>[1~2]</sup>. The rule of law is an important content that the party and the central committee adhere to. To carry out education in ideology and politics for graduate students in the view of law can effectively complete education in colleges, which also conforms to the current education environment. It can significantly improve the teaching effect, and achieve the great rejuvenation of Chinese nation.

1. Importance of Law in Education in Ideology and Politics

The education in ideology and politics is a process of inheriting ideological and political content such as Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought that our country insists on. Therefore, law is a kind of constraint and system for education in ideology and politics. When making mistakes in school, students will be punished according to the relevant management system. To improve the education quality, we must follow laws and regulations of the nation<sup>[3]</sup>. First of all, it needs to enhance the understanding of students and teachers for law through publicity and education. As a result, relevant personnel need to increase the ability of law enforcement, and restrict behaviors of students and teachers with the use of law to create good learning and teaching atmosphere for students and teachers. Therefore, law is an important tool and the most basic guarantee for education for students.

2. Problems in Ideological and Political Education from the Perspective of Law

2.1 Low Legal Awareness of Colleges for Education in Ideology and Politics

The survey results of education in ideology and politics for graduate students show that most colleges lack the legal awareness for education, which has a great negative impact on the implementation of education in ideology and politics under the perspective of law. At present, the management of colleges is still in institutionalized stage, and there is no school management according to the law. Under this management mode, students have difficulty in accessing legal knowledge. In addition, the legal awareness of students and teachers is not strong, leading to the difficulty of implementing legal management in the whole school. During the school, students often have the wrong ideas that they will not commit crimes at all, and crimes are far from their own lives. Some students even have resistance to the law and refuse to accept legal education. Therefore, it is difficult for the construction of education in ideology and politics in the view of law <sup>[4~5]</sup>.

2.2 Lack of Attention to Education in Ideology and Politics

The insufficient emphasis on education in ideology and politics for students is mainly reflected in the following points: (1) The current teaching methods for education in ideology and politics are single, and the survey data show that most colleges still conduct education with traditional teaching mode, and students are passive to acceptance of knowledge. Due to the weak legal awareness of students and insufficient attention to ideological and political content, the role of students' subjectivity is severely limited, which is also the main problems in the current education. In order to implement education in ideology and politics under the perspective of law, it is inevitable to make full use of students' proactivity, enable them to learn under the guidance of teachers, and consciously cultivate their awareness of law-abiding <sup>[6]</sup>. (2) There have some difficulty in the design of ideological and political content. As times develops, the traditional teaching mode and teaching content cannot meet the needs of contemporary people. If the education in ideology and politics adheres to traditional teaching content, it will not be beneficial for students. Considering the actual situation, the most important problem facing college students is that they have a lot of pressure. As the graduation time approaches, students will have greater mental stress. The school should infiltrate psychological consultation in ideological and political education, do good job of propaganda of employment knowledge, and help students solve problems. It is crucial to penetrate the thought of "ruled by law" in education in ideology and politics. And effective education in legality can make students recognize the status quo, and lead students forward in the future social life like a guiding light.

3. Innovation of Education in Ideology and Politics in the View of Law

3.1 To Improve Education Faculty in Ideology and Politics

The innovation of education in ideology and politics can not be achieved without the support of teachers. Therefore, colleges should train the personnel engaged in education to improve their professional quality comprehensively. In addition, the personnel should also be trained in legal knowledge to enhance the legal awareness, and promote the effective implementation of education. Furthermore, the school should also choose an experienced teacher as the legal adviser to carry out education in ideology and politics under the perspective of law <sup>[7]</sup>. Once students violate discipline in school, relevant personnel must punish students according to laws and regulations to integrate education in ideology and politics with students' legitimate rights and interests and promote the innovation and construction of education in ideology and politics.

3.2 To Attach Importance to the Quality-Oriented Education

The rule of law is a basic principle that our country insists on for a long time. For the public, it is the most basic responsibility to know the law and abide by the law. Education in ideology and politics based on law is an important means to cultivate students' legal consciousness. In order to establish a system for education in ideology and politics, the first thing to do is formulate scientific and reasonable teaching system, restrain students by using the system, and improve students' quality comprehensively through this means of quality-oriented education, so that students will be trained into qualified citizens who abide by the law and discipline. Under the restriction of the system, students tend to have resistance. Teachers need to transmit the thought to students that they can not be moved and shirk their responsibilities. They should do things well and comprehensively, put things into practice, and let students better abide by the teaching system under the guidance of correct ideological concepts, and finally form a consciousness of consciously abiding by the teaching system. In addition, teachers should supervise whether students restrain their own behavior according to the teaching system. It can help students form the consciousness of consciously observing discipline, and is also of great significance to cultivate their self-discipline habits. Finally, the establishment and implementation of system for education based on law can enable students to learn more legal knowledge in school, and form the concept of legal consciousness, which has a profound impact on their future life.

3.3 To Carry out Education in Ideology and Politics based on Concept of “Rule of Law”

At present, there exist several problems in the teaching methods in ideology and politics, which should be based on concept of “rule of law”. In philosophy, the implementation of education in ideology and politics should persist in its development. Teachers need to fully interpret the content of education in ideology and politics, such as Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought, and demonstrate relevant contents by using the phenomenon of modern society. “People-oriented” is the traditional thought of our country, and the idea of “people-oriented” is to make full use of individual’s proactivity. Students in traditional teaching mode are passive in the acceptance of knowledge. Under this teaching mode, students’ subjective initiative is severely limited. As teachers engaged in education in ideology and politics, we must respect students, their living patterns and life concepts after fully understanding ideological and political content, so that their ambitions are consistent with national goals through appropriate guidance education<sup>[8]</sup>. It is worth noting that personnel for education in ideology and politics need to optimize teaching content, improve teaching method, and make the propaganda more powerful and vivid on the basis of not changing the teaching content. Finally, we should pay attention to the collective spirit. Every class is a small team, and the power of the team is always greater than that of the individual. Only by working together, can we effectively build a system for education in ideology and politics in the view of law. Leaders in the school need to plan the relationship network structure within the university, so that the functions of the teaching, management and service departments can be reflected, and the communication between different departments should be done well to create good situation for education in ideology and politics.

4. Conclusion

In summary, the coming of new era will inevitably bring about a new environment, a new situation and a new spirit. Education in ideology and politics is an important part of education of Chinese nation, and it needs to plan and innovate the system for education in ideology and politics from concept of “rule of law” in the new era, and build good environment for education in ideology and politics in the view of law based on Constitution of our country, which is of great significance to cultivate outstanding students and promoting the construction of harmonious society, effectively promoting the achievement of great rejuvenation of China. What needs to be done now is grasp the problems existing in education in ideology and politics, build a system for education under the legal perspective step by step, and give creative play to the original content, to cultivate more young students and contribute to the great vision of social attention.
